

Comparing yourself to friends and demanding expensive items from your parents can have several negative consequences. It creates unnecessary pressure on both you and your family, leading to feelings of dissatisfaction, entitlement and even strained relationships.

Firstly, constantly comparing yourself to friends can lead to low self-esteem. When you measure your worth based on what others have, you may start feeling inadequate if you cannot match their possessions. This can create a cycle of unhappiness and dissatisfaction, making it difficult to appreciate what you already have.

Secondly, making demands for expensive items that your friends own puts undue pressure on your parents. Not all families have the same financial capabilities and expecting your parents to provide everything your friends have can cause financial strain. It may also lead to frustration and resentment within the family, as parents may feel unappreciated or burdened by unrealistic expectations.

Moreover, this habit can foster materialism and an unhealthy attitude towards money. Instead of valuing hard work and financial responsibility, you may start believing that happiness is tied to material possessions. This mindset can be harmful in the long run, as it may lead to financial irresponsibility and an inability to cope with life's limitations.

Finally, constantly comparing yourself to others can damage friendships. If your relationships are based on possessions rather than mutual respect and understanding, they may become shallow and competitive. Instead of appreciating your friends for who they are, you may only focus on what they own, weakening genuine connections.

It is essential to appreciate your unique circumstances and focus on personal growth rather than material comparisons.

BOOKS – MY BEST FRIENDS

Books are my best friends. I was introduced to the world of books early in my life. When I was a toddler, my mother got me lots of picture storybooks. Now, I select books of my own choice. I love to read novels and long-story books. In my study room, I have a shelf full of books. Some of my favourite books are – Christmas Pig, Harry Potter, Waiting for the Wolf, and Geronimo Stilton. If I didn't have books, I would get bored all the time. My mother says, books give us knowledge and answer our questions apart from transporting us to the wonderful land of stories. That's why books are my best friends.

KESHA- THE BEAUTY

Hair is the most beautiful part of the body. It not only enhances beauty but also reflects a person's inner health. Owing to current lifestyle, everyone has just one wish" सुरक्षित काले मेरे बाल". Ayurveda, the ancient science of life says, that the healthier the bone, the gorgeously long will be the hair. Those who wish to have long and healthy hair should include foods rich in vitamin C in their diet and consume amla and curry leaves juice first thing in the morning. We should apply warm oil on alternate days and shampoo with ritha and shikakai homemade shampoo.

Following an ayurvedic dinacharya and ritucharya will work like magic in improving the quality of our hair.

NOT JUST A CLOUD

White, fluffy cotton balls up high,
We are the clouds floating in the sky.
We are made up of water droplets,
Wind, weather and the Sun change our sight.
We are not just a cloud; we have many types.

The Cumulus clouds are fluffy and white,
But the Nimbus clouds hide the sunlight.
The Stratus clouds are long and grey,
But the Cirrus clouds look like rays.
We are not just a cloud; we have many types.

The Cumulonimbus clouds are heavy and frightening,
They are also called the clouds of lightning.
The Cirrocumulus clouds are very light,
But they are also fluffy and white.
Now you know, we are not just clouds.

TECHNOLOGY

Technology has made our lives easier and simpler. It is also known as 'tech' in short. Tech is anything made by man that runs on electricity or, in simpler words, anything that is electric—for example, the computer I'm using to type this article, mobile phones, television etc. We can depend on technology for many things. For instance, to type something, to watch a movie, get information on the web, call someone etc. It is very easy to use and it is very reliable. Although, rarely, it can also make a mistake. Technology is very helpful and our lives would not be as easy and comfortable if they didn't exist. I thank all the people who made our lives so easy by inventing technology.

MY FAMILY

Family, family, family,
It always keeps me jolly.
My mother and father,
They tell me to try harder.
My dear grandparents,
Tell me about the ancients.
And then my sister,
It's a total story twister.
This is my family,
And we live calmly.
