BOARDING BONDS REIGNITE

Where time paused, memories lingered — and now, the bonds of boarding reignite with a spark that never truly faded

As the golden sun dipped behind the swaying green trees of Rajkumar College, Raipur, a warm glow bathed the sprawling campus, signaling the end of a tranquil summer and the start of a new academic chapter. The stone-paved walkways, once silent and still during the vacation months, now echoed with the rhythmic clatter of trunks being wheeled, laughter bursting forth in waves, and the excited chatter of students reuniting after the long break. The air buzzed with joy and anticipation as old friends embraced tightly, exchanging stories of hometown adventures, travels, and tales of family life.

Housemasters stood at the entrances of the boarding houses, greeting each student with affectionate smiles and heartfelt welcomes, their familiar presence offering comfort and reassurance to both the returning seniors and the slightly nervous juniors. Inside the dormitories, the scent of freshly polished wood and crisp linen filled the air, mingling with the earthy fragrance of the monsoon-kissed surroundings. Students unpacked their belongings with practiced ease, pinning up new photos, re-arranging shelves, and slipping seamlessly back into the rituals of boarding life.

The dining halls soon echoed with the clang of cutlery and cheerful banter, while the sports fields in the distance began to stir with renewed energy — footballs rolling, sneakers pounding the ground, and whistles slicing through the air. Teachers strolled the corridors once again, exchanging nods and words of encouragement, as schedules were pinned and term goals outlined. The campus, which had lain in serene slumber, now throbbed with life and youth — a symphony of learning, discipline, and camaraderie rekindled. A new year had begun, and with it, came fresh hopes, renewed friendships, and countless memories waiting to be made.

JAGANATH RATH YATRA

United in Tradition – The Boys of RDBH in Celebration of Culture & Devotion

The Jagannath Rath Yatra celebration at Rajkumar College, Raipur, was a spiritually enriching experience, especially for the boarding house students who wholeheartedly took part in the temple service. Held within the college premises, the event brought the divine atmosphere of Puri to RKC, with students decorating the temple with flowers, rangoli, and lights, creating a vibrant and sacred setting. The boarding community actively participated in every aspect of the event—from preparing bhog and prasad to singing bhajans even organizing a small symbolic chariot procession of Lord Jagannath, Balabhadra, and Subhadra. Dressed in traditional attire, students pulled the chariot with devotion, celebrating their cultural roots and upholding the spiritual values that RKC instills in its students. The event not only strengthened their connection with age-old Indian traditions but also fostered teamwork, humility, and service. Many boarders shared that serving at the temple help them experience a deep sense of inner peace and unity, away from the usual academic routine. The temple service during Rath Yatra became more than just a cultural event—it was a heartfelt expression of devotion, discipline, and shared joy, leaving an unforgettable mark on everyone involved.

The spirit of Jagannath Rath Yatra was beautifully reflected in the traditional attire worn by the boarding students of Rajkumar College, Raipur. Dressed in elegant kurta-pajamas, the students stood united in front of the campus temple, radiating devotion and cultural pride. The vibrant colors and graceful simplicity of their outfits added a special charm to the day's spiritual ambience. This group photograph captures more than just faces—it reflects the sense of brotherhood, discipline, and shared values that define RKC's boarding life. As part of the temple service during the Rath Yatra celebrations, this moment became a symbol of reverence, unity, and youthful enthusiasm for India's rich heritage
